Clinical assessment: managing emergencies in primary healthcare

Nurses (RNs, ENs and practice nurses) seeking to enhance their skills in managing urgent patient presentations and conditions are invited to join Brisbane North PHN's face-to-face training course Clinical assessment: managing emergencies in primary healthcare.

This training opportunity is designed to equip nurses with the practical skills and knowledge to bridge the gap between primary care and the emergency department (ED), including:

- preparing nurses for triaging, assessing, treating, and managing patients in Urgent Care Centres
- upskilling your nursing team to manage acute presentations and conditions confidently
- improving awareness of how different conditions present in illnesses, injuries, and emergencies
- recognising limitations and know when to escalate care to ensure patient safety
- engaging in practical training using small-group scenarios based on acute presentations
